++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cold in north, rain and hill snow in south.

Today:
After an icy start it will stay cold in the north with sunny spells and a few wintry showers. Rain and strong winds in south with some hill snow, especially over Wales, clearing south during the afternoon.

Tonight:
Very cold for many northern and central places with a widespread, locally severe, frost. Cloud slowly clearing in south with winds easing.

Sunday:
Cold and clear for many, though cloud increasing from west bringing another band of rain to the southwest.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Rain will spread across many areas, turning to snow across central and especially northern parts of England and southern Scotland. Remaining cold in the north, milder in the south.
